Q: How to avoid executing the program twice I have a program in which I need to check the user input for an array of integers. I want the program to not to run the first time the user tries to run the program. And I need to get the user input for the array. Scanner input = new Scanner(System.in); int userInput=input.nextInt(); What I have so far is the above code. How do I avoid running the program twice?
A: One way is to set a boolean value as false and use that boolean value in your Scanner class like boolean firstTime = true; Scanner input = new Scanner(System.in); while(!firstTime){ int userInput=input.nextInt(); firstTime = false; } OR Scanner input = new Scanner(System.in); boolean firstTime = true; int userInput=input.nextInt(); if(!firstTime){ System.out.println("Input not allowed"); } First solution is a bit more simple but the second one will work with the first. PS: Don't forget to close the Scanner
