While Photoshop is an immensely powerful and complex piece of software, most users never need to use it. Elements is a free tool that is designed to be an introduction to the professional world of graphic design. In this list, we will be going through some of the most important Photoshop CS6 features that are not directly related to editing the text or the colors of an image. This is the list of all Photoshop CS6 features that were not specifically about the traditional editing functions.

- 1. Hue-Saturation Most digital images contain colour information, and new features in Photoshop CS6 allow you to manipulate these colours or hide them altogether. The dialog we will be looking at is called Hue/Saturation. As the name suggests, this dialog allows you to adjust the overall color of your image. How do you do this? You start by selecting a colour that you wish to be changed in the image, and then you drag this colour into the hue/saturation window. You can mix and match colours like this by pressing the "Mix" button and dragging across the other colours in the hue/saturation window. You can add new colours to an image, or remove them completely by clicking the "Add New Color" or "Remove Color" buttons respectively. You can combine multiple colours that you have selected by clicking the "Mix Composite Colors" button. There is also a button in this dialog labelled "Viewing Options". This button takes you to the same settings as the "View Options" button in the "Adjustments" dialog, discussed later. The final result of this dialog is the selection of the colour that is applied to the image.
- 2. Blur Photoshop also allows you to apply blur to your image. You will have to click on the "Blur" tab at the top of the image to get started. From here you can apply one of three blur filters to your image. Gaussian Blur Our first blur filter is the Gaussian Blur. This is useful for blurring out details around the image. To use the Gaussian blur filter on your image, drag the "Field Blur" slider to the right. The farther to the right you drag, the more blurry the image will become.

If the company is located in the US and does not have any subsidiaries, then the company must file a Form 1120S, US Income Tax Return. If the company is located in one of the Freezone Countries, then the company will file a Form 1120F, Return of US Source Income.
