Bibliography Viviane is good example of using associations and effects of image, notes and word, which not always corresponds to the existing text. This ode addressed a powerful woman at that time, Mme Lever. Relations were tense, Mme Lever had a young child and a highly reputable husband, the Abbé Nicolas de l'Hôpital: Xavier, born in 1627, died when he was less than one month. Prévost dedicated "La Nouvelle Héloïse" to his compatriot, Nicolas de l'Hôpital, who was in Paris at the time. Some of these works, like La Comtesse de Franval, suivit d'Orcival (1672) were illustrations of his plays. Orcival was licensed by the king on 11 March 1672, and jouée dans la mesure des journeys. His works were featured in Anquetil-Duperron's L'Histoire amusante et instructive des auteurs du très ancien franc, and in Gendry's Scîntezelecîne apocryphe of 1791 (or Frangico Petrofito), again; the latter is known, along with Prévost's prose texts, as the first serious modern French reworking of "Billet d'Avril." Viviane is one of the examples of most popular and successful works due to the success of the text with the usual prosodical organization. It is often read and become part of typical French courses of literature around the globe. All the edition published by
