The tech has been used for years, but until FIFA 22, it was a matter of collecting data from full-game situations that were only played by a few elite players, and conducting a complex post-processing algorithms to approximate the data. With FIFA 22, the data is being used to allow players to mimic real-life movements, and that's just the beginning. What's changing in FIFA 22 Pitch Dynamics The new physics engine introduces "Pitch Dynamics," a new set of control mechanics that enable players to take control of how the pitch reacts to movement. Players will be able to decide how the pitch reacts to sprints, take-ons, shot-kicks, through balls, and deflections. Crouch One of the most unique elements of FIFA 22 is the gameplay additions around the "Crouch" animation. Players can perform a new "low kick" move that's used in front of an opponent's foot. With a simple move, players can place the ball anywhere in the penalty area to score. The move was introduced in FIFA 16, but this year, it's been completely re-imagined, more seamlessly transitioning into "High and Low" animations. Players will also be able to perform a "Crouch" animation, which is also in a "High and Low" motion, and is now used to cleanly slide the ball. Players have the ability to kick into the air with this move, and dribble the ball out of the pitch. Communication between players is now more powerful than ever before New in-game voice communication has been improved in FIFA 22. Players can now hear each other easier, and the in-game voices will follow along with the animations, allowing the player to pick up more complex messages. For instance, the shift from the old "help" button to the new "block" button makes the message "help" a little more obvious to players. In the future, the player who can make more intelligent decisions around the communication with the ball will be victorious. AI Improvements The AI is going to be the most improved aspect of FIFA 22. Past iterations of the game had players that had to be manually controlled, but now, they have the potential to be able to play from a natural position. Players

What's new:

- New User Experience - FIFA 22 introduces a stunning new user experience that builds upon a set of core pillars including; interior and exterior depth of match, emotion, social, feel, and historical authenticity. This enables long-term FIFA Ultimate Team players to access all the benefits and improvements of FIFA Ultimate Team, while experiencing the new fast paced technical performance the 360-degree base-line of the game delivers. The attention to detail has been kept concentrated on the core of the game, returning to the traditional tactics of passing and dribbling in the most high-octane game of football on your consoles. A more tactical approach to the coverage of free kicks, with the motions of FIFA 20 being replicated in full. Greater emphasis is given to fouls, the ball possession system, and key areas of gameplay, while making sure that the ball movements of the players are as fluid as possible. EA SPORTS ANNOUNCES "DEEZEN FREE KICKS" SYSTEM - FIFA 17 Enhanced

The Free kicks changes are a really good move by EA. It was impossible to control the free kicks taken before, and this new update will make sure players use more of their feet to score, and less of a header. I love my FIFA and want to play it lol.

FIFA- especially FIFA 17, isn't known to have the greatest free kick system, but FIFA 22 has a pretty great system, allowing you more options when using your feet. The most obvious thing this update will make is that missing headers are no longer a thing. Thanks to the new defensive systems, it is impossible for players to clear the ball up high, and receive a penalty, as ball placement is a part of the game, so it will be more difficult for players to clear the ball, and clear players off, and as I said before, the most obvious one, a missing header.

Gameplay: This is definitely different from FIFA 17 where its very difficult to score from a certain angle, but this is a way to improve the player's feel for free kicks... The presentation of the player is very harsh towards players in the game, as this is already a negative type of presentation system. I don't think this will really do for the game's player feel though, as if I struggled to aim a free kick for a long time with FIFA 17, it's safe
