In his first election-eve speech in Delhi as the Prime Minister, Modi on Tuesday said the "parivartan wave" will bring a change in the politics of India. The term "parivartan" literally translates as a change in direction. "Parivartan will happen, it is getting dragged to nirvana," Modi said in his 67th election-eve speech in Delhi. (Express Photo/Anil Sharma) "This tsunami of Parivartan will bring a change in the politics of our country," Modi said in his election-eve speech in Delhi, in which he attacked the "wrong politics" of past regimes and lauded the people-friendly and development-oriented leadership of his government. "For the first time ever, the people are happy with the work of our government," Modi said, while attacking Congress President Rahul Gandhi's "corruption" and "vikas". "We want change in politics in the country. We want our politics to be based on
