triangulation of the Klein bottle How do I show that there exists a triangulation of the Klein bottle (a sphere with an identified non-orientable double curve)? My attempt Let  $S$  be a regular sphere and $S^* \subset S$  be the non-orientable double curve. Let $\alpha \subset S^*$  be the

---

identified non-orientable curve.

Each point of the boundary  $\partial S^*$  is naturally endowed with an orientation.

The Klein bottle  $\operatorname{Klein}^2$  is obtained from  $S^*$  by identifying opposite sides in the same way as in a right-angled triangulation of the square.

Since  $\operatorname{Klein}^2$  is an orientable  $2$ -manifold, there exists an embedding  $\iota: S^* \rightarrow \operatorname{Klein}^2$  such that  $\iota$  is orientation preserving (it goes along the non-orientable double curve). It is easy to see that  $\iota$  embeds  $S^*$  in a proper right-angled triangulation of $\$ \operatorname{Klein}^2 \$$ .

(Since $$ \operatorname{Klein}^2 $$  is not simple, there is no right-angled triangulation of $$ \operatorname{Klein}^2 $$
having the  $$S$
